

World Wind 1.2 Release

19 July, 2011

Tom Gaskins

World Wind Technical Manager

tom@tomgaskins.com

The background image shows a vast desert landscape with rolling hills and mountains. Several green oases are scattered across the terrain, providing a stark contrast to the surrounding tan and brown colors. The sky above is clear and blue.

Agenda

- Describe the release contents
- Introduce the new documentation
- Announce upcoming features
- Answer questions
 - Q & A at end of presentation

A Major Milestone!

- First formal release
- First of steady stream of formal releases
 - API Compatibility going forward, 1.2.x, 1.3.x, ...
 - Will also continue releasing daily
- This release made possible by
 - NASA
 - US Department of Energy
 - US Air Force
 - US Army

What's In It?

- World Wind as you've known it
 - 90% of previous nightly release contents
 - WorldWindow, KML, Data Import, HTML5
 - Examples & applications moved to worldwindx
 - Reorganized native libraries: GDAL, JOGL, HTML5
 - JNLP sites for JOGL and GDAL
 - WMS Server is included
- Tested
- Expanded & consolidated documentation

Public Subversion Repository

- Now have access to all changes and history
- <http://worldwind31.arc.nasa.gov/svn>

Documentation

- GoWorldWind.org
 - One-stop shop for all World Wind Help resources
 - <http://goworldwind.org>
- Training available soon
 - Show of hands for interest

Upcoming Funded Features

- Mobile (tablets) (QinetiQ contribution)
- Mil-std 2525B/C
- Grouping/De-cluttering placemarks, text, etc.
- Flat World improvements
- Collada, Lidar
- Each will engender a release
- There is tremendous world-wide investment in World Wind!
 - More momentum now than ever – Thank You!

Team World Wind

Cam

Dave

Lado

Patrick

Parker

Randy

Tom

Patrick Murris
(emeritus)

Forum Team

- World Wind Central
- Forum Gurus
 - nInielson
 - what_nick

The background image shows a vast desert landscape with rolling hills and mountains. Several green oases are scattered across the terrain, providing a stark contrast to the surrounding tan and brown colors. The sky above is clear and blue.

Q & A

- Raise hand in control panel so I can open your microphone
- Please introduce yourself